A close-up photograph of the aircraft's leading edge and upper surface. The image shows the transition from the fuselage to the wing, with the leading edge slat partially deployed. The upper surface of the wing is visible, along with the aircraft's white paint and some structural components.

A wide-angle photograph of a modern bridge under construction. The bridge features multiple spans supported by pylons, with a prominent green roof structure. The sky is clear and blue.

A long, narrow garden path is flanked by two rows of tall, dense green hedges. The path itself is a light-colored, possibly paved or gravel surface. The hedges are very thick and reach almost to the top of the frame. The lighting suggests a bright day, casting soft shadows on the path.

A wide-angle photograph showing a large, well-maintained green lawn. In the background, a dense line of tall, mature trees stands along a path or road. The foreground is dominated by the vibrant green grass of the lawn.

A wide-angle photograph of a grassy hillside. The foreground is covered in green grass, with a few small trees and shrubs scattered across it. In the middle ground, the hill rises, and more trees are visible, their leaves a mix of green and yellow, suggesting autumn. The sky above is a clear, pale blue. The overall scene is peaceful and natural.
